Wynelmmcr against The People. by due course of law, it is difficult to see upon what foundation this objection can rest. The power of the legislature to authorize or impose, by way of penalty, the forfeiture, upon judicial sentence, of property kept or sought to be used contrary to law, cannot at thia day be seriously questioned. It is the lowest grade and form of punishment for offences against the law, and has been too long and steadily exercised, without question, to be now involved in any doubt. Instances of the exercise of this power must be too familiar to every lawyer to need citation. The act of seizure by the officer was clearly lawful. The unlawful act was open and flagrant in the officers presence, and it would have been a gross and inexcusable breach of duty on his part had he overlooked it. The 12th section authorizes the seizure by an officer, under such circumstances, without warrant, to be taken before a magistrate, as was done in this case. The conviction and sentence were, therefore, in my judgment, in all respects lawful and proper, and the judgment of the supreme court should be reversed. Wright, J. , also delivered a written opinion in favor of affirming the judgment in the case of Wynehamer. H concurred in the dissenting opinions delivered by T. A. Johnson, J. On deciding these cases, the court passed upon and affirmed the following propositions: 1. That the prohibitory...
