Environmental Protection Agency, Office of Water, Office of Science and Technology, 2000 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)44635512 Subject: Eutrophication -- United States. Excerpt: . . . Natural enrichment ranges throughout these magnitudes of concentration according to geographic and geological regions of the country. Consequently, it would be necessary to determine the natural ambient background for each lake so that the eutrophication caused by human development and abuse can be addressed. Addressing this cultural eutrophication is the objective of this manual, but the development of nutrient criteria on a lake-by-lake basis may be prohibitively time consuming and expensive for States and Tribes. Alternatively, these lakes or reservoirs can be divided into regionally similar groups based on their physical characteristics within a proximal geographic area. Those lakes of each established group having the least land development or other human impact can be identified as the reference lakes for measuring relatively undisturbed nutrient conditions appropriate for that class and region. This reference condition information, within an appropriate historical context and objectively interpreted, then can become a candidate criterion for use as a benchmark against which other similar lakes may be compared. Before the criterion is finally established, however, the scientists and resource managers involved should assure themselves that it also will have a beneficial or at least neutral downstream effect on the lakes, reservoirs, streams, or estuaries within or just below the area of application. This concept, as illustrated in Figure 1. 1, is essentially the basis for the National Nutrient Criteria Program and is described variously throughout this text. Figure 1. 1. Conceptual basis for the National Nutrient Criteria Program using TP as an example variable. Nutrient Criteria - Lakes and Reservoirs...
