The law was held invalid, not because it violated any express provision of the constitution, for it was admitted that it did not, but because it was thought to contravene certain principles of local self government, that the court by way of inference regarded as part of their system of government. And still another distinction was taken, resting upon mere inference, and much relied on in the subsequent case, between the public and proprietary characters of a municipal corporation. Supreme control by the legislature over its public character is conceded, while it is thought that in its latter character it has, or should have, the same independence in the management of its proprietary interests that is conceded to a private corporation. These distinctions are found to be illusory and without any well founded distinction in prin The State ea: rel....
