Excerpt: .before us, a large and noble town in one blaze: the churchsteeples, being made of timber, were great pyramids of fire above the rest; behind us, the churchsteeples and heights of our camp covered with spectators. The enemy all anxious suspense; the roar of cannon, mortars, musketry; the crash of churches, ships upon the stocks, and whole streets falling together in ruin, to fill the ear; the storm of the redoubts, with the objects above described, to fill the eye; and the reflection, that, perhaps, a defeat was a final loss to the British Empire in America, to fill the mind, --made the whole a picture, and complication of horror and importance, beyond any thing that came to my lot to be a witness to. I much lament my nephew s absence: it was a sight for a young soldier that the longest service may not furnish again; and had he been with me he would likewise have been out of danger, for except two cannon-balls that went a hundred yards over our heads, we were not in any part of the direction of the enemy s shot. A moment of the day was critical. Howe s left was staggered; two battalions had been sent to reinforce them, but we perceived them on a beach, seeming in embarrassment which way to march. Clinton, then next for business, took the part, without waiting for orders, to throw himself into a boat to lead them; he...
