Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from A Journal of the Expedition to Quebec: In the Year 1775, Under the Command of Colonel Benedict Arnold The march of Arnold and his determined followers across the wilderness of Maine, and the subsequent attack and repulse at Quebec, form one of the most interesting, as well as exciting episodes in our revolutionary history; the fortitude also with which these devoted men sustained themselves amid the gloom and solitude of those untrodden wilds, merits the grateful preservation of all records which may have escaped the decaying elements of time and neglect. A spirit, akin to this, has led to the issuing of the following Journal of a soldier in that expedition. For the purpose of co-operating with General Schuyler, who had the command of the invasion of Canada, Washington planned this expedition to Quebec, which was as remarkable for its novelty and boldness, as for the dangers and difficulties which it involved. These overcome, however, and a brilliant and speedy issue to the struggle in Canada, was rendered almost certain. The subject of this expedition...
